An alarm of fire at midnight is a startling thing but not half so startling to many who hear it as would be the sudden knowledge of their own dangerous physical condition. Thousands of thousands are hurrying to their graves because they are carelessly indifferent to the insidious inroads of disease and the means of cure. It is the mission of H. H. Warner & Co., with their Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, to arouse men to a sense of their danger and then cure them.—

HAS the defence in the Morey letter case introduced any Louisiana liars, or is it simply the New York home production that have been used?

BOSTON has decided through the state railroad commissioner to charter no elevated railroads. Boston streets were never meant for that sort of traffic.

The attack upon the Chinese in Denver, yesterday, was one of the most revolting crimes of the century. There was, there is, there can be no excuse for such an atrocious piece of villiany. The brutes who were engaged in it will probably escape punishment, but in all justice, every one of them should be taken out and hanged to the nearest tree. Such frightful atrocities cast a shadow over our vaunted civilization. It is siekening even to think that we have people in America capable of committing such fiendish deeds.—[Chicago News. The attack upon the Chinese in Denver,

But how about the wily scoundrels who are educated men, and surrounded by the refinements of life, not ignorant, and in the midst of rough life as those men are; sober, not drunk as these men were, who, in the quietude of their offices, out of the depths of their deprayed intellects will deliberately hatch this forgery and publish it to the world, and back it up by lying? They are the guilty ones. The blood shed in Denver is at their doors. If our laws could act at God's do, they would be punished for

It has been discovered that when the republican congress thanked the heroes of Gettysburg in 1864 the name of Hancock was not included in the resolution. Hancock was suspected at that time of entertaining a sneaking regard for the democratic party and that was sufficient to cause the omission. The fact remains, however, that Hancock actually attended the entertainment at Gettysburg. The official reports of his superior officers indicate that he also participated to some extent.—[St. Post Dispatch.

There is another place where it does not occur. In the heretical school history, pub lished by Dulany in Baltimore, and taught in a number of southern schools, Hancock is not mentioned at all in the account of the battle of Gettysburg; only Meade's name on the union side occurs. When the book was written it was not supposed Hancock would be the southern candidate for president. In this same book it is amusing to note what a space McClellan occupies. It is nearly as much as is given to the best southern generals, and when battles are told of between McClellan and Lee the text speaks of how the "two giants" made ready for the "death grapple," etc.

A MANUFACTURER in Chicago, whom the Times of that city describes as having written one of the calmest and sanest communications about the Morey letter, can not understand in his communication why the republican managers should be so frantic in their denial that the letter is genuine. He can not understand why General Garfield should be so positive in repudiating it. There is nothing in the letter as he reads it which calls for denial or repudiation. It contains no assertion which in his mind is not correct, and he adds that if the sentiments of the letter are not held by General Garfield he shall not vote for him. But what if Garfield did not write the letter? There is the point, If it had been a letter as lofty and full of good doctrine as some of Paul's epistles the question would still remain. If Garfield didn't write it he must say so and so must the managers of his party. This calm, sane man has relegated everything to the low touchstone of expediency. That is not in issue at all. Men may differ as to the sentiment of the letter. This man says it suits him. Well and good. But the thing involved is, that General Garfield did not write it. Hence it is a forgery.

A STORM ON THE SUN. The Sympathetic Effect Seen on the Earth. Observers of the sun found indications of Observers of the sun found indications of intense commotion on the 11th, 12th and 13th of August. The sun spots were many, large and active, and protuberances shot up their rose-colored tongues with increased force and velocity from the surface. The earth made instantaneous response to the solar storm. A magnetic disturbance suddenly began, accompanied by an unusual exhibition of earth currents. The magnetic variations were frequent and large, and the exhibition of earth currents. The magnetic variations were frequent and large, and the earth currents continuous and strong. It is years since the Greenwich observatory has recorded magnetic disturbances of equal magnitude, and it sends forth a timely warning to telegraph engineers, and espe-cially to those concerned in laying submacables, that earth currents may now ome frequent as compared with the qui of recent years. A superb exhibit etness of recent years. A superb exhibition of aurora accompanied the magnetic disturbance. An observer at the Stoneyhurst 'observatory describes it as recalling the magnificent dsiplays of 1869, 1870, and 1871, while the play of the magnets was one of the most violent ever recorded at that observatory. The auroral display was extensively observed in England and Scotland. One observer describes it as an outburst of streamers, appearing like wavy, swaying curtains from the zenith. Another writes that the streaks extended from horizon to zenith, the color being principally pale blue with a reddishtinge. Another paints the display as a brilliant band of white light followed by streamers, each streamer fading away before the succeding one became very bright. Still another records a glowing celestial picture of the northern horizon skirted by a bright white haze, terminating in an ill-defined arch, from which sprang a large number of broad streamers, stretching toward he zenith.

The same phenomenon was seen by American observeres, although it did not receive the attention bestowed upon it by European observers. It is evident, however, that the epoch of grand auroras and magnetic storms has returned, and that our northern skies for months to come will probably be lighted with auroral flames. More earnestly than ever arises the question of the cause of the sun spot cycle and its intimate connection with electric and magnetic phenomena. No one doubts that the commotion in the solar orb is reflected on the earth in the flashes of auroral light and the earth in the flashes of auroral light and the earth in the flashes of auroral light and the erratic movements of the magnetic needle. We can see the cause and note the effect. But no one, if the theory of the disturbing influence of the great planets is rejected, has found the clue to the secret of the sun spots. We can only grope in darkness while we wait for persistent searchers to solve the problem, and admire with mingled reverence and awe the mighty power with which the sun sways his retinue of worlds, and the strength of the symmathetic which the sun sways his retinue of worlds, and the strength of the sympathetic chord by which each planet in the stystem reflects its auroral light and disturbed mag netism the abnormal condition of the great obstructions of the passage at night.

The year 1881 will be a mathematical curiosity. From left to right and from right to left it reads the same; 18 divided by 2 gives 9 as a quotient; 81 divided by 9 gives 9; if divided by 9, the quotient contains a 9; if multipled by 9 the product contains two 9s; 1 and 8 are 9; 8 and 1 are 9. If the 18 be placed under the 81 and added, the sum is 99. If the figures be added thus, 1, 8, 8, 1, it will give 18. Reading from left to right it is 18, and reading from right to left it is 18, and 18 is two-ninths of 81. By adding, dividing and multiplying 19 9s are produced, being one 9 for each year required to complete the century.

There was some fooling he serve against his arbitrachies. widowed mother, and Hoagland within a few years married her. There was some feeling, he says, against his making his stepdaughter his wife, but they were a happy couple, and the prejudice died out. Ten years ago the second wife died. Her daughter was then 15. Five years elapsed, and then Hoagland again married his stepdaughter, who was also his step-grand-daughter. She is still living, and her husband's age, aside from the fact that she had no daughter when she became his wife, precludes the idea of his peculiar system being carried any further. He has children of his own by each of the three wives, and the complications of their relationships are almost endless. Hoagland declares that his matrimonial experience, covering about fifty years, has been exceptionally happy. The last two wives inherited the good qualities of their mothers, and all were so much alike that they have seemed to him the same woman, with her youth occasionally renewed.
